

Introduction to Stratocore

STRATOCORE

Stratocore is a centrally-managed Research Facilities Management System, used at King's by internal and external researchers (including students working in labs – PhD, MSc and BSc) to book laboratory equipment and services.

Getting started

Booking equipment or ordering services in King's facilities using Stratocore is quick and easy. All you need to get started is:

- 1 a Stratocore User Account
- 2 an associated financial account (activity code) to allocate your bookings (and costs where relevant).

Setting up a Stratocore User Account

Please follow the instructions in this Quick Card to submit your new user account request.

Once you have an account, visit <https://ppms.eu/kcl/> and log-in using your King's single sign-on credentials (k-number and password) and selecting the facility you wish to use. Once logged in to your Stratocore user account you will be able to view the resources available in the facility and create bookings and order services, where applicable.

Finding your financial activity code

Financial activity codes are already set up in Stratocore and so in the first instance, search for and select the one that is associated with your project/booking. If you cannot find the code or your Group information in the system, please contact RMID-help@kcl.ac.uk.

Support

Stratocore is intuitive to use but if you require any support there are many helpful resources available on the Stratocore Hub, particularly the video and Quick Cards for regular users here. If you have any questions about creating a user account or any other Stratocore-specific queries, please contact RMID-help@kcl.ac.uk.

Note

As more King's research facilities join Stratocore, your single user account lets you view and request access to their resources and services.
